ABOUT CHRISTIAN ETHICAL INVESTING

This portfolio contains carefully selected investment vehicles using our Christian Ethical criteria, which is fully underpinned by our seven Christian Pillars.

The pillars are linked to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Epworth supports the utilisation of the SDGs, but feel that without a robust theological underpinning, they risk being misused by corporations or organisations attempting to appear ethical.

INVESTMENT MANAGER COMMENTARY

"Despite considerable volatility around the US election, we saw a very constructive backdrop for investors this quarter. The equity pattern from early October saw a broadening out of equity performance beyond the much publicised "Magnificent Seven" megacap stocks. We saw strong performance in more small and mid cap oriented themes, as the market seems to perceive domestic revenues as being more resilient in a world of potential tariffs. The cuts in interest rates from key central banks also provided a degree of comfort that the inflation concerns of the past few years were abating.

This backdrop proved a more constructive one for sustainable investors, with relative underweights to megacap stocks and relative overweights to smaller companies proving to be beneficial. The strongest performing areas of the portfolio were the exposures to artificial intelligence, robotics and cyber security which all benefited from improved sentiment towards innovation themes. We also saw strong performance from our water and waste investments which benefitted from the market rotation into small and medium sized companies.

Climate policy detail was notably absent from the various debates between the two candidates for the US Presidency this November. This is a complicated area. On the one hand the President elect is hostile towards clean energy. On the other Elon Musk is a key influence and Republican states like Texas are huge players in the solar industry. Energy transition spending continues to be very strong globally, particularly in China. The challenge for investors will be in targeting the areas of the transition and navigating the politics."
